In spite of the recent modernization of the Kurmi community they have still retained their old age cultural traits and values which is distinctive from other tribals and Hindu castes. In their family functions such as marriage, birth, death ceremonies they observe certain rituals which reminds us of their rich cultural tradition. Culture includes the material objects of human interaction, techniques of social interaction and social orientation, world view, performing arts etc. The symbolism of decorative art may be drawn from their habitat, the gods and deities of the Kurmi-Mahatos in their ‘cultural area’ customarily related in some ways to the forces of nature, stories about which are contained in cultural communication are very often the sample people.

The music as a whole is divided into movements which are related to each other by aesthetic rather than manifest association. For musically sensitive listener, each phase each movement and the symphony as a whole form a system of inter connected unities. The whole performance may take an hour but the message is transmitted as if everything happened simultaneously. The whole analysis is really true to the Kurmi-Mahatos and other ethnic groups residing in this cultural area. The Kurmi-Mahatos has got very rich folklore in respect of folk music, folklore, folk medicine, folk belief, folk song, folk dance, folk tales, mythology, proverb, riddles, etc.

The Cultural Life of Kurmi Community in the District of Mayurbhanj

Leelabati Mohanta

animals rarely refer to creatures found outside the habitat.

Folk drama

The anthropological approach provides a systematic description and analysis of such a symbolic act in its verbal, non-verbal communication in the context of social matrix of kinship, modes of body decoration, folk songs and folk dances. The Kurmi-Mahatos rituals in day to day life in its cultural context are a pattern of symbolic communication that is supposed to guide the members of the community in their social activities. The senders and receivers of messages are very fond of their collective excellence like songs and dances. Some are ritualistics and some are secular. In taste and flavour, in rhythmic beauty and fury, with regional rustic tonal quality, jhumar is an expression of unique collective excellence of the region. Many important jhumar poets and lyricists like Binaniya Singh, Uday Karma Kar, Dina Tanti, Brajuram Bhabaprit, Ananda Ojha, Ramkrishna Ganguly, Narottam Das, Trailokya Mandal, Pitambar Das, Baul Das, Narayan Sing,
Sristidhar Mahato and Haripada Mahato etc. had contributed many poems with lyrical grace in Jhumar form.

Following the above tradition, Girish Mahato, Bipin Bihari Mukhi, Bhabtosh Satpathy, Hajari Rajowar and others continue to write and compose jhumar song with regional folk language, which communicate the deeper cultural dynamics of the tribals and peasants which are integrated with unsophisticated regional literature or Janapadiya Sahitya. The aeshophisticated regional literature or Janapadiya Sahitya, the aesthetic quality is the delicate and yet vigorous use of metaphors, symbols and syntax may easily be compared with the expressive quality of the established ‘developed’ Indian language. Jhumar deserves to be noted for its unique quality of poetic-cum-musical excellence. The Bhakti movement beginning in the south and sweeping the rest of India in the 16th and 17th centuries due to Gaudiya Vaishnava movement in Bengal and Odisha, systematically also influenced the tribals.

Dance

The main performers of this dance are professional singers, lyricists, musicians and dance directors. They have been traditionally patronized by the royal families.

For dance they use different types of instruments. That is:

1. Madal or Mrudanga- It has four types:
   (a) Bhadaria madal
   (b) Tunda Madal
   (c) Thungri madal
   (d) Jhumri madal

2. Dhal- It has six types:
   (a) Rangabaja
   (b) Judanbaja
   (c) Asralbaja
   (d) Asarchamkabaja
   (e) Badtalbaja
   (f) Naktibaja

3. Dhumsa- It has four types:
   (a) Nag Dhumsa
   (b) Nisan Dhumsa
   (c) Tumang Dhumsa
   (d) Jodi Dhumsa.

Mahuri- It has two types:
   (a) Gavi Mahuri
   (b) Talpatria Mahuri.

Kurmi-Mahantas has many types of dance. That is:

1. Nachni Dance or Sakhi Dance
2. Panta Dance and Jawa Dance or Karam Nach
3. Kathi Dance and Mahada Dance
4. Chhau Dance

1. Nachni Dance or Sakhi Dance

   Centering round Jhumar songs, a solo dance named Nachni Naccha is very popular among the Mahanta community. This dance is performed at the time of marriage ceremony, birth ceremony and other social festivals. This dance is performed by one female dancer or with a male dancer. This dance is originated along with the jhumar song in the late 18th century in the royal courts.

   The male dancer is called Rasik and the female dancer is called Nachni. Rasik wears a dhoti in a special way covering both the lung is known as Mal Kachha Mara Dhoti Pindha. In the body he wears either a embroidered chaplen or a sal, a head with a peacock feather. He holds a flute in his hand, wears a garland and ghunguru on the feet.
On the other hand the female counterpart Nachini’s dress consists of a colourful saree or a ghagra with blouse. Over the blouse, she wears an embroidered jacket. Also, she has a number of different ornaments on the nose notha or phuli and the hands such a makdi, baju, chur, chapa, kadhi, banki etc.

The subject matter of this dance is mainly on the lore between Radha and Krishna. The dancers themselves sing the songs. So the singers and dancers are the same artists. Dance critics have taken this dance as falk classical because of its mudras. The costume of this dance is known as Aughara. There are many mudras in this dance such a Asanghura (greeting with folded hands) asanbanda (prayer to different Devas and Devis), which are performed successively followed by karan, chari, than and lagan and lastly Natki.

2. Panta Dance and Jawa Dance or Karam Dance

Pantanach is performed by the Kurmi-Mahanta community in the occasion of karam festival and. This dance is a group dance, also performed by the neighbouring tribal communities. Though this is linked with religious festival performed on Bhadraba Sukla Ekadasi but now-a-days dance is celebrated only evening of the year.

A song for example –
"Karamkatikat Akhalathapanakari
Akhalathapana Brajer Nari,
Ajarekarameker Rati
Kariakaram puja karamrajarseba
Gopin save Karen Ekadasi
Ajarekaramkarrati"

“Aj tare karam raja Ghareduare
Kal tare karam raja kansnadi pare.”

This dance is also known as Dandsal, Dand Jhumar and Jhimaphulianach. Since the dance is performed in standing position it is called Dandsal. Also the dance is based on the tune of jhumar songs and it is called Dandajhumar. The name Jhingaphulia is a Metaphor on janki flower which blossoms in the evening and died in the morning like that of the panta dance which starts at evening continues to morning.

There is a basic difference between the jhumar dance and panda dance. In jhumar there is one or two dancers whereas the panta is a group dance. In this dance both males and females take part and dance by holding hands and singing songs. On the tune of madala instruments they move their feet and body forward and backward. The songs are of different tunes. With the change of the tune, the dancing mode used to change. There are many modes and tunes of this dance such as Patiamedha, Khema, Adkhema, Rinjhamatha, Damkach, Udasia, Rasrasia, Jhumka, Jhuma Tamadia, Nagpuria, Patartual, Nikan and Chalbata.

There is no need of stage for performing this dance as it could be performed from the courtyard of the house to the field. It starts with different bandana or prayer songs dedicated to Lord Ganesh, village deity, ten dikpals, parents and elders of the village. In the pre independence times, this dance was patronized by the royal courts, zamindars and rich men of the village but now there is a decline of this dance.

3. Kathi Dance or Mahada Dance

Kathinach is another form of dance prevalent in north Odisha where mainly the mahata community takes part. It is known as kathi dance because the performers dance with two wooden sticks or kathi in their hands. This dance is performed in October and November during the time of Durga Puja and ends with the immersion of the Goddess\(^7\). The male dancers take part in this dance. It is a group dance. They wear sarees in their wastes in ghagra style with many plaits and a blouse to cover their body. A number of ornaments like nakachana on the nose, ear studs on the ears and bahuti on the hands, garlands on the neck, hands and heads. Sometimes leaves decorate their bodies as ornaments according to the characters they play. Village main road or the courtyards in front of the house are the places of their dance. They perform in the moonlit night or with torches or petromax lights. Now-a days electricity lights have replaced the present lighting system.

In this dance the music instruments such as madala, flute, thila, lautumba, kendara and gopijantra are used. Besides these, the wooden stick held by the dancer produce prominent pleasant sound along with the other music instruments. The wooden sticks are made of kuruchi tree and produced a sweet sound with minimum beating. The length of the sticks are roughly three feet and the colour is white so that in the light, They give a sparkling colour.

The dancers in a group dance in a semi-circular line by moving from left to right and again from right to left direction. In this way they circulate with dancing, beating two sticks on the tune of music. They also show different modes shouting, haihaidesh. The theme of this dance is based on Puranic stories, historical episodes and social life like Rama and Sita Banabas, Indrajit Badha, Mandodari Soka, Balibabha, Krishna coming to Kansapura, playing of pasha between Pandavas and Kauravas, Chhatrapati Siraja, expeditious of Bargis, deer hunting, pala, fish catching palabaradekhapala, bilabachapala, kathachirapala, etc.

The dialogue and the lyrics of this dance are on Kudumali language generally spoken by the Kurmi – Mahanta community. Also, Odia, Bengali, Hindi and local tribal language such as Santali, Mundari and Bhumijali are used in this dance finds an improtant place in the folk traditions of the area. It educates the local village, illiterate people regarding the environment protection, literacy, preservation of jungle and animals etc\(^8\).

4. Chhau Dance

Even in Chhau dance many words used are taken from the krumali language. The Kurmis participate in chhau dance. This dance is contributed in Mayurbhanj district. Kurmis participate in the jhumar dance of Mayurbhanj, which depict different feelings of human being. The design and dance techniques are the greatest contribution of Kurmis of the region.

Songs

Epics of Indian literature and Krishna myth with the help of seven tribal peasants folk forms of the area, namely Khemta, Arkhema, Patiamedha, Rinjamatha, Domkoch, Jhingaphulia or Chaiti, Bagaliya or Udhaya and Bhadria superbly blended in artistic expression of Vaishnava aesthetics with kirtan (mass prayer) tunes. Under the patronage of Rajas of different Garhs over the region a typical tradition of dance by dancing girls are locally know as Nachni Nacha accompanied by elaborate Nachnisalaiya or Darbari Jhumar forms of music developed. The music experts came to be known as Rasik.\(^9\)

Jhumar song

Jhumar is origin of chhau dance of Mayurbhanj and Jharkhand. Though it is the main dance of dharma Ganjan originally but now becomes ritual dance forms blended in one dance from known as chhau. These are Nachin, Dann
Nach, Kirtan, Gajan Natua, Majhi Nach. Chhau dance is a form of mask dance, mainly reflecting the lasya (passion), Tandava (destruction) and other moods. Stories from the epics and the Puranas choreographed by ustads (specialists) in micro regionally standardized forms. In the chhau dance of Mayurbhanj, the Kurmi – mahatas are the main participants. They do not use mask, but jhumar provides the main background of the choreography. Jhumar song is divided into ten type.

1. Jawanachijhumar
2. Pantasaliajhumar
3. Kathinachijhumar
4. Nachininachijhumar
5. Bibhahakalinajhumar
6. Upanasikajhumar
7. Darabarijhumar
8. Sakhinachijhumar
9. Mahadanachijhumar
10. Chhauanachijhumar

Jawanachijhumar

It is performed in Bhadrab Ekadasi puja for karam raja (karam thakur). The unmarried girls observe this puja.

Panthasalijhumar

It is also observed in Bhadrab month Ekadasi for puja of karam raja. Here some raga and ragini are used that – patiamedha, Khemta, Adkhemta, Rinjhama, Khemta, Jhingaphulia, Udasia, Rasrasia, Jhumka Jhumta, Tamadia, Nagpuria, Patartala, Nikan, Chalchanta, Chalkhenta.

Kathinachijhumar

The performers dance with two wooden sticks or kathi in their hand.

Nachininachijhumar

This dance is performed at the time of marriage ceremony, birth ceremony and other social festivals. This dance is performed by one female dancer or with a male dancer.

Bibhahakalinajhumar

This jhumar song is sung at the time of marriage ceremony. Both bridegroom sider gether and the song is managed unit to both the parties.

Upanasikajhumar

This jhumar song use for the main gods and goddess. This song is two type one is – Bandan Salia Jhumar 2- Mantra Salia Jhumar.

Darabarijhumar

This jhumar is performed in kings darabar. It is only for the entertainment for king and wealthy persons of the kingdom.

Sakhinachijhumar

When the Vaishnavism spread across Odisha, at that time the sakhi and sakhi dance of Vashnavism influenced the Kurmis. Then the Kurmis followed dancing and singing of Jhumar song.

Mahadanachijhumar

This dance is performed for nature gods like birds, animals, field, tree and Assur –Action of this dance is based on epics and folk tales like – Rabana Badha, Mahisasura Badha.

Chhauanachijhumar

Jhumar is original convainer of chhau dance of Mayurbhanj. Though it is the ritual dance of Dharma Gajan originally but now became ritual dance of Siva – Ganjan, chhau dance is form of dance, mainly reflecting the lasya (passion), tandava and other moods.

Besides these there are other dances and songs like karama dance mainly for women connected with jawa songs. The Bandna or ceremonial songs depicting the glory of cattle are sung by males. The women also sings like tusi, which is ritual as well as secular songs. They sing also plantation songs Dhan rope or udhaya, songs. The male and female dance is Danrnach during Dal-Gara or jita festival. Various forms of marriage songs are also very much prevalent among the Kudmi – mahantas. Basically the Kurmi – mahantas are very much fond of dance and music and are pleasure oriented.

But the Darabarijhumar is a rather late origin. It originated in the last part of the 18th century and the early part of the 19th century in the royal courts of the Mayurbhanj and Keonjhar states.

In this song and dance the traditional music instruments are used such as madal, Dhumsa, Dhal, Kadakha, Sahainai, Flute, Thila, Kendera, Gopiyantra etc. Besides these, now a days modern instruments like Dubitabla, Harmonium are also used.

A collection of Tusu songs revel the mood of the people in Mayurbhanj:

 Bangalaisekangalkorito
 Hamadersabkichukairenilo.
 Partite aerjabonakollekata
 Hamrahamhabonabhoyer shalpata

(After coming here Bengalees made us pauper, taken away everything from us. We won’t go to Calcutta for the meetings, we would not be used as a dinner plate.)

A collection of Bandana songs reveal the mood of the people in Mayurbhanj:

 Jago Ma Lachhmi
 Jago Ma Bhagabati,
 Jago Sutain Amabashya Rat,
 Jagoke re Pratiphal,

Pow Ba Re Akhani,
Pancha Putra Dasha Dhenu Gai.12

(Oh Mother Lachhmi, Oh Mother Bhagabati; keep awakening, the night of Amabashya. The cost of awakening will give you five sons and ten cows.)

References:

Leelabati Mohanta, Lecturer in History, R.N.College, Barbil, Mayurbhanj.